Lines in sand trace criminal links

THE DNA Project, an NGO that promotes the importance of DNA evidence in solving crimes, put together a scenario to show how evidence can be lost by people on the scene of a crime. They set up a large sand pit at Cape Town station with a mugshot of a criminal painted on it. As people entering and leaving the station walked over the sand, the face became harder to identify.

PICTURE: DAVID RITCHIE